Description

Velocity Report seems to create always a log file (velocity.log) even when there is nothing to log. So users are complaining about an empty log file in the same location where they run the client from (which is the desktop for a lot of users).

Would it be possible to have it log into the server log (preferably) or else in a specific location like the home folder?
And of course only get a log file when there is actually something to log.

- Status changed from New to Closed

Fixed with v1.5.10 the velocity.log file will now be located in $user.home$/.servoy/
